

JEWISH SYNAGOGUE OPENED AT CAMDEN

Rosh Hoshana and Yom Kippur Services Conducted by Rabbi Solomon Grayzel

Camden's newest Jewish place of worship, the Beth-El Synagogue at Parkside was formally opened last night with the beginning of Rosh Hoshana and Yom Kippur services. Rabbi Solomon Grayzel, who has been engaged for the ensuing year, delivered his opening sermon last evening.

Outlining his aims the new rabbi said:

"We need a religion of modern men. But that does not mean that we have to abandon the things we cherish of the past. That does not make men modern. To accomplish those purposes, we purpose to do two principal things. First, to so interpret Judaism in our services as to give the people a clear understanding of what it stands for and, secondly, to organize a model Hebrew school so future generations may at least know what they may accomplish for the Jews and the world."
