

An-ner. fted rom Jast nber ince me-lited lzed vhat ving ough bear cone of ourg the iand Vice iza-ecu-don dis-line, nty, the th out. ated sing soli-fter to to the kill nas has City the nree as has gust iam rik-pu-nțly irty ris-hey the ion, two rest age ade ug-ail-cof rch . A was ne-

Ł.

e'n-[rs do do ing an to ng-

er-of rs. ore

eir ho the lkep-to tes a atan gh, re-

CLUE IS GIVEN BY BROTHER Clothes of Dead Man Recognized by tives...Police Keen on Trail of Suspect. Relatives

NEW YORK. August 22.-A great stride toward the solution of Camden's trunk mystery was made yesterday when the victim was identified beyond reason-able doubt as Solomon Jacob Rosen-bloom of Windber, Pa, and the facts brought out by the investigations of County Detectives Smith' and Carrol pointed to the dead man's son Alexander and other members of his family. It was said by relatives and by Henry Priedman, clerk in Rosenbloom's general store, that there had been frequent squabbles and threats in the Rosenbloom family and that the father had been antagofized by all because of the strict watch he kept on his exchequer. He in turn accused his wife and son Alexander of taking goods from the store and sell-ing them without returning the money to him. him.

ing them without returning the money to him. Alexander a Bover. The relatives also said that Alexander was of a roving nature and always de-manding large sums of money from his father. Refusals led to frequent bitter brawls, especially when the father was under the influence of liquor. The facts brought out by the detective showed that the day' the father disap-peared the son, for whom the police of two states are now searching, started out on a long trip which included New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, at which place he ordered goods in the father's name to the amount of $28,000. At the same time he advertised a closing out sale of all the merchandise in the store, which was to include the new shipments. The detectives have traced his move-ments till the day he mysteriously dis-appeared after being toild by a relative that the police were about to make him explain the absence of his father. They have found the liveryman who hauled a heavy trunk from the general store, to the Windber railroad station, and then traced the trunk from Chestnut street ferry to Mount Ephraim, near where the body was found. The only fact they are puzzled over is the presence of a rulia-delphia newspaper of the date of Novem-ber 15, while the trunk was shipped on November 20. The detectives and Assistant District

November 15 and did not arrive till November 20. Tracing Missing Son. The detectives and Assistant District Attorney Wolverton were reluctant to tell just how they learned of the Wind-ber clue, saying they wished to protect another person who first hinted the pos-sibility to them. It was learned later that the man from whom the first in-formation came was the eldest son of the dead man, William Rosenbloom, who lives at Pledmont, W. Va. It is said he wrote to the prosecutor suggesting the man might be his father, who was missing. Easer to grasp at anything that would help them solve one of the greatest mysteries mysteri-ous New Jersey has ever seen, they worked the clue. John Smith then went up to Windber, while Carrol worked the local end. Smith returned with Friedman, who voi unteered to come, and also brought the addresses of Philadelphia relatives of Rosenbloom, whose identity he refuses to reveal. These, with the clerk, iden-tified the body.

DROPS BOMB IN HOT LEAD.

Dealer's Legs Shattered, Junk Ey● Blown

Out, Store Wrecked. URG, N. Y., August Blown Out, Store Wrecked. OGDENSBURG, N. Y., August 22: While the process of melting lead jun was going on at D. K. Truell's junk sho here yesterday a loud explosion followe the throwing of a fresh lot of metal inj the melting pot. Truell was hurle across the building, both his legs wer shattered and one eye was blown ou He will probably die. The interior of the building was wreck ed and set ablaze. From the force of th explosion it is believed that a bomb of some sort was among the junk and wa accidentally thrown into the molten meta with a shovelful of the refuse. junk shop al into hurled